Dear Dr Pappalardo,

I am pleased to inform you that your manuscript entitled 'Ensuring the Quality of in silico Evidence: Application to Medical Devices' (BIB-26-0315.R1) has been accepted for publication in Briefings in Bioinformatics. If you have any queries regarding publication, or production queries, please contact oupsupport@scipris.com.

Next steps:

You will receive an email from no-reply@scipris.com within the next few days which is your invitation to sign up for an account with SciPris, Oxford University Press' author portal hosted by Aptara, if you do not already hold one. Please register, or log into your account and follow the online instructions which will guide you through signing your licence and arranging any payment due. The email and the portal have clearly signposted support options if you need any help during this process. Please note that SciPris is a completely different system from (ScholarOne/Editorial Manager), so your credentials to submit your manuscript here will not work there. Once you've created a SciPris account, you will be able to use it whenever you publish with our journal or any OUP journal. Please note that OUP will only ever request payment for applicable fees be made via SciPris or to an OUP bank account. If you ever have concerns about the legitimacy of a request, please do not hesitate to contact a customer services agent via the SciPris portal or directly via oupsupport@scipris.com.

BiB has been published online-only since 2018. You will be able to access published articles and content via the Oxford Academic platform at <https://academic.oup.com/bib>. When your article is published you will be sent a toll-free link to enable easy access to your article online.

We would like to thank you for submitting your paper, and we hope to receive further manuscripts from you again in the future.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

Dr. Shuangge Ma (Editor in Chief) and Dr. Zhenxia Chen (Deputy Editor),
